

Accessibility Statement

Last updated: 19th May 2026

We are committed to making this website accessible and enjoyable for as many people as possible. Whether you're here to read stories from life aboard Round Tuit or to browse the latest print-on-demand designs, we want your experience to feel welcoming, clear and easy to navigate.

1. Our commitment to accessibility

We aim to follow recognised best practices for accessibility wherever possible. This includes:

- Using clear, readable typography
- Maintaining good colour contrast
- Providing descriptive alt text for images
- Ensuring the site works on mobile, tablet and desktop
- Keeping navigation simple and consistent

As a small independent creative business, we are continually learning and improving. Accessibility is an ongoing process, not a one-time task.

2. Where the site may still improve

Some areas of the website may not yet meet every accessibility guideline. This may include:

- Older blog posts that need updated alt text
- Occasional embedded third-party content (e.g. maps, videos, shop integrations) that we can't fully control
- Features provided by external services, such as our print-on-demand partner

If you encounter anything that makes the site difficult to use, we genuinely want to know so we can fix it.

3. Feedback and support

If you experience any accessibility barriers or have suggestions for improvement, please get in touch.

Email: admin@narrowboatroundtuit.co.uk.

What to include:

- A brief description of the issue
- The page you were on
- The device or browser you were using

We'll do our best to respond promptly and make any necessary adjustments.

4. Ongoing improvements

This Accessibility Statement will be reviewed and updated as the website evolves. As we add new features, content or design updates, accessibility will remain a core consideration.
